Mt. Fuji Principles (Yamanashi/Shizuoka Prefecture)

- Learn about, embrace, and give thanks for Mt. Fuji's abundant blessings
- Protect Mt. Fuji's beautiful nature and expand its culture
- Reduce human impact upon Mt. Fuji's ecosystem and aim for harmony
- Do whatever you can to protect the environment of Mt. Fuji
- Preserve the nature, scenery, history, and culture of Mt. Fuji for future generations

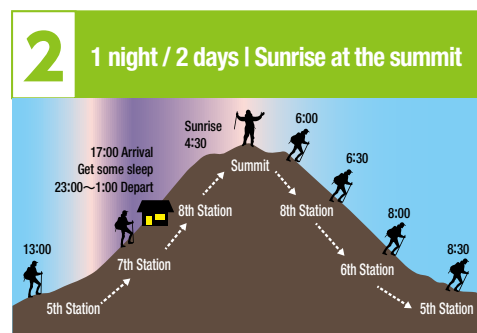

Mt. Fuji has been worshipped as the dwelling place of gods since ancient times.
Unimaginably vast and beautiful sights can be found at its summit.

Three Plans to Enjoy Climbing Mt. Fuji

● Perfect choice for beginners!

Arrive at the 7th / 8th Station around 5:00 pm and stay overnight at a hut. This allows climbers to gradually acclimate to the elevation and climb at a relaxed pace. Welcome the sunrise the following morning from the great view of the hut. This plan is ideal for those that are not determined to see the sunrise from the summit. This relaxed plan offers climbers with plenty of time to rest at the hut.

● The gold standard!

Arrive at the 5th Station at around noon and have a relaxed lunch while acclimating to the elevation. Start climbing in the afternoon and arrive at a hut at around 5:00 pm. Catch some sleep until around midnight and depart for the summit. Welcome the sunrise from the summit at around 4:30 am. Take a hike around the summit crater (Ohachi meguri) and descend to the 5th Station.

● Get the most from your hike!

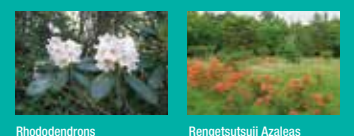

Stay at a hut between the 5th and 7th Station on the first day. Use this time to enjoy the short Ochudo Hiking Trail at the 5th Station. Welcome the sunrise from the hut on the next morning. Then, climb to the summit during the day without the crowds than climb throughout the night. After summiting, stay another night at a hut around 8th Station while enjoying the unique nighttime view of the lights from far below.

Please cooperate with "Mt. Fuji Conservation Fund" in order to preserve the mountain environment and ensure the safety of climbers. The standard donation is 1,000 yen per person.

From base to summit on the Yoshida Trail

Mt. Fuji Climbing

Kanadorii ↔ Summit
Ascent : 11 hr 30 min
Descent : 6 hr 20 min

Mountain climbing season for Mt. Fuji is from July 1st to September 10th.
It is very dangerous except for seasonal climbing.

The hike up the Yoshida Trail was once a pilgrim's path to worship Mt. Fuji. The trail is dotted with historic sites and cultural assets. Among the grand nature here, you can almost hear the prayers of generations past. Follow the footsteps of over a thousand years of climbers, taking in incredible vistas as you make your way to Japan's greatest summit, a world above the clouds.

1 Kanadorii

This is the first torii gate on the journey up Mt. Fuji, and it marks the boundary between the ordinary world and the sacred realm of the mountain. Soak in the breathtaking view of Mt. Fuji before setting off on your adventure!

2 Oshi, Former Togawa Family Residence

This Oshi Pilgrim's Inn was once used as a lodging by worshippers of Mt. Fuji. Get a closer look at the building's unique architecture, attire worn by followers of the Fujiko religious group, and more at the Former Togawa Family Residence, which is open to the public.

3 Kitaguchi Hongu Fuji Sengen-jinja Shrine

Fuji worshippers begin their trek with a visit to this sacred shrine. Eleven of its halls are designated as Important Cultural Assets. Aside the right side of main hall, you can find the gate that marks the traditional start of the Yoshida Trail.

4 Nakanochaya

This teahouse has been in business for over 300 years. As the midpoint between the Yoshida Trail starting point and Umagaeshi trailhead, it's a perfect time to have some rest and small meals.

5 Umagaeshi

As evidenced by its name (horse return), horses used not to allow entering the trail at this point. At the torii gate, the pair of monkey statues placed as guardians of Mt. Fuji. Beyond this gate, the land is sacred, and the trail grows steeper.

6 2nd Station

The Fuji Omuro Sengen-jinja Shrine (Hongu - main shrine) was built here in the early 9th century to placate Mt. Fuji in the time of eruptions. Between 1973 and 1974, the main shrine, the Important Cultural Asset, was moved to Satomiya in Fujikawaguchiko Town. However the front shrine is still sit.

7 4.5th Station

Gozaishi Sengen-jinja Shrine and Inoue, the mountain hut are lined along the trail at 4.5th Station as representing worshipper's prosperity and the strength of faith. In the past, women were allowed to climb to this point for Mt. Fuji's "birthday," celebrated once every sixty years.

8 5th Station

This area marks the timberline, so views from the hiking trail will suddenly leap up in scale, allowing you to look over swaths of nature and distant mountains. The air is also thinner, so steady your breath before moving on.

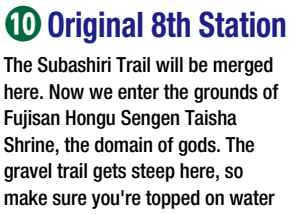

9 6th Station

The Fuji-Subaru Line will be merged here. On the lively path ahead, you'll find well-developed zig-zagging paths and many mountain huts. Tread carefully so as not to send rocks tumbling down.

10 Original 8th Station

The Subashiri Trail will be merged here. Now we enter the grounds of Fujisan Hongu Sengen Taisha Shrine, the domain of gods. The gravel trail gets steep here, so make sure you're topped on water and have used the restroom before heading for the summit.

11 Summit

After a steep climb, pass through Kusushi-jinja Shrine's torii gate to reach the Yoshida Trail summit. Only a bit further to Mt. Fuji's rim. Let the accomplishment sink in and enjoy the views, then head out for a walk around the rim.

Every mountain hut have eco-friendly toilets.
When you use toilets, please follow the instructions and have some coins to support facility maintenance.
Thank you for your cooperation.

STOP Bullet climbing!

(Be careful of one-day climbing by beginners!)

"Bullet climbing" means leaving the Mt. Fuji 5th station in the evening and climbing up overnight without staying at mountain hut. Climbing overnight increases the risk of altitude sickness and accidents due to exhaustion.
If you would like to climb Mt. Fuji, we wish you to make a safe climbing plan.
